"Padula's Montgomery High series is a hard-hitting look at today's teen culture. Fictional, yes, but as Padula notes in her biography, based on current events. The books all feature a large cast of students who assemble and reassemble in couplehood. They are from the typically popular crowd, the faith crowd, and the straight-and-narrow group. Although it might be best to start from the beginning, the winding story line throughout the five books currently available are written so a reader can step into any of them. It will take time to get to know the different cliques, but they are fleshed and real, facing angst, fear, and joy. I did not read them in order, and wasn't bothered. Each story is told in multiple viewpoints and are mostly daily activities, behind-the-scenes events at school, home, church, sporting events, or activities. One of the stories,

The Forces Within, is one of the character's first-person accounts of a strange dream-like adventure with the friends lost in an evil-laced mansion. Lies, experimentation, angst, and self-discovery are explored." - Lisa Lickel, Author

Stacy A. Padula is the Founder and President of South Shore College Consulting & Tutoring. A native of Pembroke, Massachusetts, she has accrued years of experience working with adolescents as a tutor, college counselor, mentor, life coach, and youth group leader. Stacy's first novel, "The Right Person," was published in 2010. In 2011, "When Darkness Tries to Hide" was published, followed by "The Aftermath" (Padula's personal favorite) in 2013. In 2014, both "The Battle for Innocence" and "The Forces Within" were released, and in 2015, all five books hit the shelves of Barnes & Noble. For Stacy, it was a dream come true to see her books for sale in the popular, mainstream bookstore!Background: Stacy was a Presidential Scholar and on the Dean's List at Wentworth, where she studied Architecture and Interior Design. After graduation, she worked at an architecture firm in Boston from 2006-2008. Although she enjoyed her work, she felt something was missing--she wanted to spend more time helping people grow academically and spiritually. For close to a year, she split her time between tutoring, writing, and working at a design firm in Plymouth. When she fell in love with tutoring, she left the A&D industry completely and took a full-time position with an educational company. Her career took off, and within one year, she was promoted to Program Director. Stacy knew she had found her niche! During her eight years with that company, she received multiple promotions and held a variety of titles, including Manager of Curriculum & Instruction and Director of Operations. In 2016, Stacy founded South Shore College Consulting & Tutoring. Stacy wrote the Montgomery Lake High books in the hopes of preparing teens to face the "war zone" that is high school--to help kids deal with the stress and peer pressure, and to encourage them to "steer a straight path, pursue God, and not fall for the false promises of the world."
