Jeff Taylor is a trained ecologist who has hiked thousands of miles across North America and Europe. He lives in Marina di Pisa, Tuscany.

If you want to get off the beaten track, this will inspire you to see some of the natural beauty of Tuscany. I bought this for friends about to go to Tuscany, but it made me want to go (as if I really needed any prodding). I hope to "borrow it back" for a future trip to Italy.

Enjoyed the book. Gave us a great hike in the Cinque Terre.

5 days of hiking and 50 miles. Great book! The Italian Hiking Club has a great job of marking trails, but this guide gives you some great suggestions.

Very interesting, complete and concise. Great directions, tips and insight makes this a great guide book.

This is the best hiking book I have ever read. It is very user-friendly. Just about any question I might have has been anticipated. The book is arranged in a very concise orderly fashion. I will recommend it to my hiking friends. I look forward to purchasing books this author may write in the future.

This book has everything, directions for the crazy Italian roads, detailed trail descriptions, but the information on the ecology, geology, and history of the region was what really put this over the top. Not sure why more people haven't discovered it, but made my trip!

Excellent

A nice book with good suggestions. Have not tried them yet, so I cannot testify on how accurate the descriptions are.
