Yes, I like physical, hold in your hands, maps even if I also use a GPS. I wanted a 1:200000 map for our trip to Umbria, and this one does the job. It covers Umbria, Le Marche and a touch of Tuscany. It folds easy enough into place and has enough detail for our general, local travel. It folds out pretty big- it'll be hard to use while driving unless you have a "navigator" in the seat next to you. Or you can fold it enough to leave open the section you're driving in. I like to review and go over the map, making notes, before the day's trip. One needs a magnifying lens for the really small details, e.g., teeny tiny towns, church markings. The main roads are easy enough to see. They provide little, sticky arrows to point out places of interest, e.g. the kids want to go to Citta della domenica(amusement park) which is included on the map along with other places of interest; however, with use, the arrows fall off. Circle it or make a note. Buon Viaggio!
