Book by Borgman, Jim

The detail in Jim Borgman's work is amazing. The perspective and angles and the energy in each drawing seems to jump off of the page. Any cartoonist or fan of cartooning should have a copy of this book. Most cartoonists will tell you they learned how to do what they do from looking at other cartoonist's work and there is a wealth of knowledge in these pages. The fact Borgman uses a brush instead of a pen blows my mind. Masterful brush work in cartooning and comics in general fascinates me. It's a tricky craft to master a small brush and how he works in so many little details with one is inspiring. And not only can he draw anything, his ideas and writing are unmatched. I've never been to Cincinnati but in the first few examples of Borgman's work I feel like I know that city as if I lived there. In one drawing and a few words the amount of information his work projects is worthy of your time. Also check out 'Disturbing The Peace' (forward by Bill Watterson of 'Calvin & Hobbes') and 'Jim Borgman: My 25 Years At the Cincinnati Enquirer'. Borgman currently draws the popular syndicated strip 'Zits', And he uses a brush for that too!

a grand collection of editorials from daily strip co-creator Zits. His linework dances, and Jim Borgman has the ability to distill a story idea down to a single image. Sometimes funny, sometimes touching, sometimes thought provoking, but always masterful. All of his books are a treasure to own and read, but for those who grew up or live in and around the Queen City it is a necessity to have this in your library.
